USE OF STUDENTS IN PUBLIC INFORMATION PROGRAMS

In many ways, students can keep the school in the public eye and win support for it. Student performances, displays, athletic events, service projects, contests, etc., influence the attitudes and opinions of citizens.

Activities through which pupils are presented to the public should be a logical part of the instructional program, and should fit in with its educational objectives.

In addition, the student passes along information about the school. Consequently, there is need for the pupil to be informed properly and prepared to represent the school by principals and by teachers.
